“Many Canadians want Canada to be 51st State” just a guy in Barrie who wants the good Netflix.

Barrie -

“They get like way more movies!” Said Clark Risbo, a pouting 41 year-old living in his aunt’s basement. “So I’m definitely in favour of giving up health care and flooding the country with guns if it means I can watch the Bourne movies... in a row!” Incoming President Trump has been posting that he’d like to see Canada become the 51st state, unaware that if it were, it would create roughly 32 million Democratic voters, insuring there would never be a Republican government in power, likely ever again.

War victims living in rubble most concerned about Blake Lively/Justin Baldoni feud.

Syria -

The conflict has now expanded beyond the borders of the two actors. Baldoni is suing the New York Times for libel, while Lively has launched a new lawsuit over what happened on the set of their film. From the Ukraine to Lebanon to Syria, victims of war have voiced their support for the sweeping media coverage. “What really matters is self-involved, semi-talented actors.” Said one woman clutching her injured child in the explosive-riddled desert patch where her house once was. “Sure, we have our problems, but lets never forget, murky on-set sexual meanderings between people whose lives we could only pray to have is really what the media and the public should be focused on. If its not too much trouble could you hand me my arm?”

Canada dispatches ‘Littlest Hobo’ to bite Trump in the nuts.

Toronto -

“We didn’t start this shit but we’re sure as hell going to finish it!” Said the legendary stars trainer. “He’s still got some tread on the tires and can’t wait to serve his country.” The reclusive Canadian star has a winter home in South Florida so it won't be difficult for him to sniff out Mar-A-Lago. “We squeezed some cheap bronzer into a pale of soiled depends, that should lead him straight to Trump.” Many feel the move is premature but with a dangerous criminal, many feel the move is necessary. New lyrics were even written for the mission – There’s a voice, keeps on callin’me, down the road that’s where I’ll always be, every stop I make I’ll make a new friend... but right now I’m gonna chew some insane guys sack.

Mark Carney expected to announce Liberal leadership bid, and that your cat died.

Ottawa -

Known in political circles as ‘Captain Fun,’ The former governor of the Bank of Canada and of the UK, is likely to announce that he will bring his harrowing and bleak gaze to the race to replace Justin Trudeau. “We’re big believers in opposites.” Said a Liberal strategist, “We know voters have had it with ‘Sunny Ways’ so we’re going with a ‘Dismal Ways’ kind of thing.” The only Liberals who have formerly announced are former MP and Montreal businessman Frank Baylis, who is best known for having lost a debate to a traffic cone, and Nepean MP, Chandra Arya who wants to abandon the Monarchy raise the retirement age, two issues that weigh heavily on Canadians minds...if it were 1973.

Chilly snap forces Trump inauguration indoors as BBQ season starts in Canada.

Timmons -

“What can I say, had a hankering for some poutine dogs!” Said Grant Kelpner, local part-time bartender and home chef. “Yeah, geeze, sorry it got a little frosty down there, I get it, you can’t have all those billionaires shuddering, bad optics, plus they’ll be shaky enough after Trump ditches them when shit gets real. Up here it’s a balmy – 40, so hell, time to crank up the Broil King! Made in Canada! See that Leafs game last night? Habs looked like they found out there’s no Santa! They’re a different team this year I tellya! Brew?” When it was announced that temperatures were excepted to reach -7 in Washington, plans to swear in the 47th President were moved indoors, leaving many Trump supporters who paid up to 5000 dollars (US) to attend the ceremony out in the cold, literally.

West Edmonton Mall to become Trump-themed fun park.

Edmonton -

After selling out Canada by refusing to sign on to the Premiers agreement to fight the tariffs almost certainly going into effect when Trump slithers back into the White House, Alberta premier and part time Canadian, Danielle Smith, announced that the world famous Mall will now be an homage to her new boss. It will have a state of the art golf course and 190 square acres of Chinese made storage pens for the migrants who will be kicked out of the U.S. Smith, who could barely contain her quisling excitement said - “All I’ve ever wanted to be is American! I’m especially excited about the boot-licking kiosks!” Reaction was swift, across the country Smith’s actions, or lack of, were widely condemned, most notably by a former FLQ member who said from his home in exile, “What a traitorous weasel!”

Trump deports Giant pandas.

Washington -

“They’re not sending their best pandas, the pandas come here, they eat our bamboo, they crap all over America, they take advantage of us, it’s really a lousy deal for us! China empties their animal mental asylums into America and it stops today!” Trump was relentless in his criticism of the adorable Giant pandas that were on loan from China and attracting thousands of families to the Smithsonian Zoo in Washington D.C. Trump went on to yell - “Ling Bing and Fling Poo are on their way back to China and I say good riddance! Americans should be looking at American animals in captivity, like a horse... or something.” The President then went on to demand that children enjoying the antics of the pair of pandas should be reported to the proper authorities.

Trump blames figure skating for air disaster.

Washington -

Moments after the horrendous mid air collision above the Reagan airport, Trump addressed a distraught nation -- “They have very sharp skates you know, people are talking, they like to move around a lot, they’re wild, just unpredictable and really dangerous people and it’s likely that’s why the crash took place. We’re looking into banning figure skating and replacing it with skate fighting, that’ll be a one on one battle using skates on your hands. Very popular.”

Canada appoints Burton Cummings as ‘fentanyl czar.’

Ottawa -

There was only one clear choice...and it was made. After reaching an agreement with Donald Trump, Canada agreed to swiftly put into place many actions to stop the trickle of fentanyl into the U.S. Including the appointment of a ‘fentanyl czar’ There was no argument among officials. The federal government shone the special Cummings signal into the night sky, and Canada’s greatest secret weapon showed up to serve his country. “He has the moustache, so it was a natural fit.” Said a security officer. “When Canada has been in crisis it can always count on its loyal son, and very experienced drug expert, to stand on guard.” American officials are said to be delighted with the pick and have also asked for a matinee performance of ‘Star Baby’. Cummings himself told a relieved nation... ”Far out!”

Canada turns off Bronzer pipeline, Trump lifts tariffs.

Ottawa -

“Obviously most Americans, including President Trump, are unaware that they import 99.9% of their skin bronzer from Northern Saskatchewan. There’s so much bronzer up there it pools on the topsoil. Of course, Canadians don’t use it, we don’t have a fragile sense of ourselves, but we do know there is a direct pipeline into the White House, so we nipped this whole thing in the bud. We had no choice, we didn’t want to but we knew a protracted trade war would be harmful to both our countries.” Said a spokesperson for the PM’s office. Trump was quick to thank Canada and signed a bill that would ensure he takes his greasy head out of his ass before he thinks he can push around a sovereign nation.

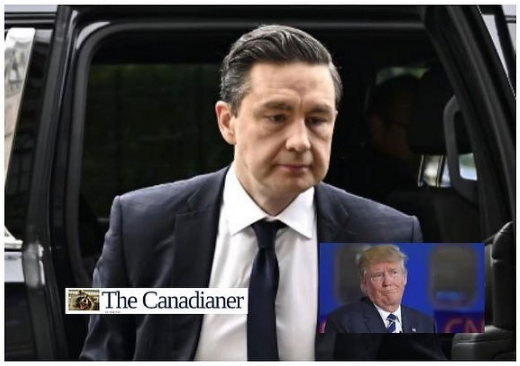

Hegseth says Ukraine can join NATO if it can out-drink him.

Washington -

“They’re a bunch of pussies!” Blared the newly appointed Secretary of Defense. “We’ll settle this like goddamn men, not a bunch of DEI homos! And I’m sober right now, wait till I get going!” Another week of mayhem in the U.S. culminated with Hegseth going on record ruling out NATO membership for the embattled country and saying that Europe is responsible for Ukraine’s defense. “And when I’m goddamn done with Ukraine, Europe can belly up to the bar! I can out-drink all of’em! Well, maybe not Germany, let me get back on that.”

MAGA wannabe crushed by falling chunk of irony.

Ottawa -

Pierre Poilievre, the leader of the opposition, was found stumbling around in circles wearing nothing but an open housecoat and a ‘Make America Great Again’ ball cap on the front lawn of Stornaway during a blizzard this afternoon. After a medical crew tucked him into an ambulance, he was reportedly sobbing and muttering -- “But...but...I was so close... I had all my wedge issues, I did the right hateful things and stoked division wherever I could, I blamed everything on previous governments with no actual policies to correct anything... and then this.” The two people close to Poilievre, said he had been on an emotional spiral since Donald Trump referenced him, saying – “I don’t care who Trudeau’s opposition is.” Conservative insiders are re-convening behind closed doors to figure out a way to ditch him for someone likeable.

Ottawa announces state of the art high-speed rail, to be built long after you're dead.

Ottawa -

Much like a meandering, delay-plagued VIA trip, the Federal government took time out from panicking and announced plans to eventually build a high speed rail service between Toronto and Quebec City. The line will called "Alto" and most likely will be some kind of old-timey novelty adventure by the time it is completed. First, a study to develop the plan, which will take a minimum of five years, (so add another seven because, government) will be followed by negotiations to build on some first-nations land (so that'll be speedy) and eventually, bids from contractors will begin. By that time, self-driving cars will have a dedicated pan-Canadian route, but there remains the lucrative, "When I was a kid this is how we travelled market."

'American credibility' to be included at Oscars - In Memoriam segment.

Hollywood -

She was once the darling of the global theatre, the envy of the world stage... now, a shambling decrepit joke, chain smoking and cackling through chipped make-up, half drank bloody marys and Michelob beer cans, some spilled in front of a cracked make up mirror, coughing and trying to muster a smile but the damage has been done. It hung on, but time is cruel, and so is its current administration. "I was robbed and cheated", wheezed the has-been. "Everyone has been cruel to me, taken advantage of me!" Former friends and family could only hang their heads and say – there's only so much we could do, they made this choice, we have lives to get on with, as painful as this is. America raised its head one more time, eyes as black as coal dust to say "Am I great again yet?"

25% ‘measle tariff’ goes into effect at midnight.

Washington -

“Canada has been very bad to us, they get 95% of their measles from us, we don’t need anything Canada has, they have taken advantage, so no more, any measles going into Canada are getting tariffed baby! It’s a beautiful word, so’s measle if y’think about it.” The President was unconvinced when medical experts told him that Canada doesn’t want any measles from the U.S. That Canada doesn’t know what you’re talking about, and measles aren’t a taxable thing. And, that even if they did somehow ‘want American measles’, most Canadians have sense enough to have been vaccinated when they were 5, Trump was undeterred. “Without our measles, Canada is not a viable country! I hear people talking.”

Poilievre found twitching in glue trap. “Squeaking became unbearable” say neighbours.

Ottawa -

“We became concerned when the usual whining about Trudeau faded and was replaced by a high pitched kind of squealing, mewly crying.” Said the nearest neighbours to Stornaway. “I mean, we’re used to him being kind of pouty and he’s never said as much as hello to us, but we still felt we should call the authorities.” The leader of the official opposition was found writhing in a large glue-trap in the basement of his taxpayer provided luxury home. One emergency responder said, “He was in a daze, no idea how long he’d been stuck there, he just kept repeating ‘Carbon tax Carney’, then would stop and try to rhyme carbon with other words, then he just broke down sobbing. Anyway, we hosed him off, not even a thanks. Just a smirk.”

Israel targets discarded Shawarma.

Tel Aviv –

"We're taking no chances! Its as simple as that!" Said an agitated Israeli military commander. Countless volleys of American made missiles tracked and decimated the delicious chicken Shawarma that had been cast aside at a local mall, presumably by a shopper. "You say 'shopper' we say terrorist!" The IDF spokesperson ranted. Many nations have condemned the action calling it unnecessary and a complete over-reaction. Israel's Prime Minister, Benjamin Netanyahu vowed to track down all unaccounted Middle Eastern, pita-based sandwiches, saying - "Wait until you see what we've got planned for Falafel Hut!"

Trump demands 'Trans-Canada' pipeline be renamed.

Washington -

"If they want a trade deal any time soon they can forget it unless they rename it!" Said a more bloated and angry than usual Trump. "This trans for everyone has got to go, they have to tear it down and build a regular pipeline or we'll tariff the hell out of them!" The pipeline, which transports natural gas strictly within Canada, has been in operation for 70 years and was one of the first pipelines built in the country. So far no one in the Trump administration has approached the President to explain any of these facts. Trump veered off topic for a few minutes then came back to accuse Canada of trying to force a trans agenda on the regular hetero-normative pipeline infrastructure. Alberta's Premier, Danielle Smith was quick to agree with Trump.

Trump claims Acetaminophen pouring in from Canada. Carney appoints ‘Tylenol Czar.’

Ottawa –

In his latest effort to distract from the looming release of the Epstein files, Donald Trump is claiming not only that the active ingredient in Tylenol, Acetaminophen, causes autism in children, but also that most of the drug is pouring in from cartel-controlled super labs in Canada. In actual fact, roughly a shoebox full of Acetaminophen makes its way into the states from Canada yearly, usually in the carry on luggage of Vegas bound fun-seekers, although in the last year those numbers are down roughly 40%… mainly because Canadians have decided to spend their vacation dollars somewhere other than a back-stabbing, cult-controlled, far-right freak-tocracy. The ‘cartel-controlled super-labs’ Trump refers to are actually Shopper Drug Marts, which his administration claims, are communist enclaves of dangerous left-wing terrorists.

WestJet to begin charging for flushable toilets.

Calgary –

“We thought charging passengers for reclining seats would be enough of a cash grab, but it didn’t quite give us the profit margin we were looking for, so asking for a few dollars to enjoy this unique WestJet service seemed reasonable.” Said an unusually calm WestJet service representative who went on to say, “We’re also looking at the possibility of a seatbelt fee.” In recent years, Canadian customers have faced a growing number of nagging add-ons for what most airlines would never consider a chargeable service. When asked about the legality of profiting from what should be considered a basic hygiene issue, a West Jet lawyer cut in on the call and responded with a sharp retort – “Hey, you’d eat an egg sandwich at the Calgary airport for 18 bucks but you’re complaining about a flush charge?”

Canada Post replaces mail carriers with giant ‘Letter Cannon.’

Ottawa -

“We’re confident most of the mail will reach its intended address.” Said a spokesperson for the failing Crown corporation that is losing ten million dollars a day. “We picked these up in a sweet deal with South Korea who have been streamlining their defence systems. We modded out the powered charge and replaced it with a Co2 powered ignition that can send one ton of mail about forty miles. So there will be no Canada Post trucks necessary any longer in urban centres which already have their share of traffic problems. We’re aiming for parks and recreational areas where the mail will land safely and then people can dig through and find correspondences, cheques and whatnot with their address, plus kids love it! It's like a treasure hunt.”

Ford voter fulfills life long dream of buying beer at a gas station.

Barrie -

“You dream of a day like this but you never really believe it will happen, then it does, and well... I’m sorry, I promised myself I wouldn’t get emotional.” Said 36 year-old Ed Slitzky, part-time banquet bartender and paint-ball instructor. “My whole life has been an inconvenience up until now, and I don't care that it cost billions to get rid of the Beer Store and all its employees so that hard working Ontarians can choose from well over three or four brands at mildly inflated prices while gassing up. It’s like Ontario has become world class over night!” Circle K has become the latest convenience outlet to carry beer and wine in Ontario. Former Prime Minister, Stephen Harper, was appointed to the board of ‘Couche-Tard’, which owns Circle K, in March.

Venezuelan drug boat tour packages down sharply.

Caracas –

Once a thriving tourist attraction, the ‘be a drug smuggler for a day’ industry has completely evaporated. After the U.S. completely destroyed another alleged drug boat, the 21st in the last two months, curious tourists are opting for safer thrill-seeking options, like walking through the red-light district with American bills hanging out of your pockets or consuming questionable street fare from food carts. “Either way, it’s America making it tough on our business.” Said Carlito Perez, owner of a small group of boats. “Between tariffs and illegal boat bombings, most tourists are too frightened to spend a beautiful day on the ocean. I used to be able to take up to 15 families a day out on the open water, they’d laugh and toss fake bags of cocaine back and forth. Well, that’s all over now.” If there is one silver lining, the ‘Dunk Pete Hegseth into an alligator pit’ booths are raking it in.

Poilievre calls Jays “Despicable.” Says win was to cover up Liberal corruption.

Ottawa –

Continuing his uncanny inability to ‘read the room’, opposition leader and overall buzzkill, Pierre Poilievre, warned Canadians not to be distracted by this chance for Canada’s baseball team to win the World Series as anything but a smokescreen for the Liberal party to lead voters away from decades of corruption, despite Canadians from coast to coast, regardless of political stripe, rejoicing in the streets. “Obviously this was another attempt by the elites to trick you. Do not fall for it.” Said Poilievre, as wildly joyous sports fans celebrated in the streets and everyone forgot how shitty things are for a night. He then went back to looking at old photos of the Freedom convoy and quietly sobbing. Poilievre also announced a caucus retreat to meet with cabinet to come up with more ways to weird out the public and seem unhinged.

Canada loses measles elimination status. Smith says Diphtheria is next, announces big parade.

Edmonton -

“It’s a great day for people who love freedom, and who believe in the right to ignore logical safety measures, especially when it comes to our children!” Said Alberta Premier, Danielle Smith. “We’re so proud to live a province that provides a choice! We know Albertans are tough and the human body will naturally take care of itself, without Ottawa sticking it’s nose in.” On Monday, the Pan American Health Organization stripped Canada of it’s status after failing to curb an outbreak of the virus for 12 consecutive months. Alberta had the most severe outbreak due to appalling vaccination rates. Ontario also saw a dramatic rise in cases. Premier Ford in Ontario is said to be trying to figure out a way to fight the spread but has been busy trying to push through beer sales in emergency rooms.

Poilievre says Halloween teaches kids to beg for handouts, calls for total ban.

Ottawa -

In a desperate attempt to re-establish his control over a flailing Conservative party, the leader of the opposition went on a lengthy tirade against the beloved fall holiday, calling it “Organized welfare and socialism at its worst.” The statement took many in his own party by surprise, some of whom had already dressed in costume for a members party that was to take place yesterday evening. “Kinda hard to get behind a Halloween ban when you’re dressed like a pumpkin.” Said one baffled MP. Poilievre continued his angry screed claiming that the holiday was a Liberal ploy to distribute as much candy as possible to justify their multi-million dollar national dental program.
